

Now I See

In despair's grip, where hope did cease,
I found You there, my source of peace,
While tears did stream and hearts did break,
Your comfort flowed, for my own sake.

In my world ablaze, You quenched the flame,
When love turned false, You stayed the same,
They cast their fuel, intent to scar,
But You, my Shield, were never far.

My heart did bleed, my spirit sore,
To You my anguished soul did pour,
And in my darkest, you decreed,
"Enough," and came to meet my need.

Undeserved, yet graced by You,
Your mercy, like morning dew,
Has been my kin, my steadfast guide,
When all have left, You stayed by my side.

From youthful days to motherhood's stress,
In times of doubt, in love's recess,
Your strength has buoyed me through the storm,
A beacon bright, a love transformed.

Now I see, with eyes unsealed,
Your constant guard, Your love revealed,
For every false one now removed,
You set me high, Your point proved.

Higher ground, to You I owe,
For true connections that You bestow,
And for the life that's now my own,
With meaning deep, seeds well-sown.

Thank you, Father, ever near,
For opening eyes, for holding dear,
In Your embrace, I've found my worth,
With grateful heart, I walk this earth.

Thank you, Jesus, for Your grace,
For carrying me from that darkened place,
Your love, the rock on which I stand,
My sheltering fortress, Your guiding hand.

Authored by Michele Kemp